Reflection:

Is the fifth and last great discourse of Jesus in this gospel, in which, while announcing the fall of Jerusalem and the destruction of the temple, he exhorts the church to maintain a vigilant attitude until the return of the Son of Man at last of the times. Despite the use of common images and words in apocalyptic literature, the speech should not be seen as an itinerary of events that mark the exact date of the coming of the Son of Man. On the contrary, the speech constantly warns about the uncertainty and surprise of the hour. Although part of the speech can be interpreted in light of events related to the fall of Jerusalem and the destruction of the temple, its message is not limited to a description of the past, but its horizon extends through the entire history of the church. To the present of the one who reads the Gospel, and to the indeterminate future of the Lord's Parousia.
