Reflection:

Jesus, as on so many other occasions, has gone out to preach in the open. His apostles and the crowd gladly follow him, because they know that the Master has the words of eternal life. The people of Israel wandered, confused by their own guides, the scribes, Pharisees and Sadducees, whom Jesus described as blind guides. Now that Jesus appears, will he be the Messiah? many wonder to themselves, but they find nothing in him of the figure of an earthly liberator, full of power and punisher of his adversaries, so promised by his teachers. On the contrary, for those who came seeking political liberation for Israel, they come across a Messiah who proposes the path of self-denial, humility, poverty, suffering ... But all this based on a great reward in the Kingdom of the Heavens.
