Reflection:

Imagine yourself in a boat with the disciples. Allow yourself to experience the joyous anticipation at the start of a trip and then the terror when the gale sweeps across the boat. Your life is in danger. He looks to Jesus to save him, but He is sleeping and as if He does not care. And then feel the relief when He speaks with authority, and calms the wind and the sea. Do you feel ashamed when He questions your faith? Is that all you want to tell him after this adventure?

The short phrase "Let's go to the other side" has strategic importance for Marcos and for my training as a disciple. I am delighted to accept Jesus' invitation to embark and everything is going well for a while. But then the crossing proves difficult, it certainly almost takes the life of the small group. In fact, if it hadn't been for the presence of Jesus, all would have been lost. Let me be the one with the presence of mind to wake you up, and shout a warning into your ear. Let me observe in awe that He saves the day with one word.

In this dramatic episode Mark warns us that we are moving to a new depth of discipleship. I pray that my faith in him will keep me close to him, in the storms that threaten to bog down not only me, but also the Church, the world, and nature itself.
