Reflection:

There will always be something mysterious and hidden about the kingdom of God. Ideally we have occasional little guidelines of what it can be or where it can be found. Today's first parable reminds us that while we live our ordinary day-to-day lives, the kingdom continues to grow and we don't know how. We are not the ones driving it but a mysterious power beyond our comprehension. This is a consoling teaching for Christian communities under persecution or living in a hostile secular environment, or those whose membership is dwindling.

Equally comforting is the second parable which also deals with the theme of growth. The smallest grain of mustard does not prevent it from becoming the largest of the "bushes". Christians are often tempted to be the most numerous, the most powerful, the most influential religion in the world. Even if those hopes were fulfilled, they would not be a guarantee that the kingdom of God has arrived. As Christians we'd better see ourselves as mustard seeds, small, childish, humble, and trusting. As Jesus said elsewhere: "Fear not, little flock, for it is the great pleasure of the Father to give you the kingdom."
